The tiger is a mammal animal which is known as the most powerful animal in the forest, its body is 7 to 10 feet long. The largest population of the tiger is found in our country India, it is found in maximum quantity in the Sundarbans forest of India.

This animal looks most beautiful but it is as beautiful as it is dangerous because it is carnivorous and can kill and eat almost all the animals of the forest such as deer, cow, goat, buffalo, chital etc. animals are its favourite food. is.

It is mainly found on the continent of Asia. A decade ago, tigers were hunted for their skin and other body bones, so the Indian government declared the tiger a national animal.

Tiger is the national animal of India. Due to its immense powers, it has been given the title of national animal. Tiger is a species of cat. It is a carnivorous animal that relies on hunting for other wildlife for its food.

Each tiger has different types of stripes on its body. The colour of these stripes is normally black and light brown but blue and white colour is also seen in some other species. The species found in India is Panthera tigris.

At the same time, tigers of different countries have been kept in some birdhouses like Nandankanan (Odisha). Generally, white tigers are not seen anywhere in India but some white tigers are found in the Odisha state of India. The tiger is well versed in many qualities, due to which it can become a threat not only to animals but also to humans.

The tiger is also famous for its weight and strength apart from its black and yellow stripes. An average tiger can have up to 100 kg. According to many scientists and researchers, there is a great difference in the weight and size of female and male tigers.

Some figures say that the weight of a male tiger has been found to be 1.7 times higher on average than that of a female tiger. Although the speed of running of tigers is very fast, due to its weight he also gets tired quickly.
