

- Case Study -

Nia was just 10 years old when she and her family went for a vacation to the Thar Desert in Rajasthan for the first time. They stayed in a beautiful hotel in Jaisalmer that looked like a palace. Nia and her family stayed there exploring the beautiful landscape for 5 days. The weather was hot and dry during the day, and cool and breezy during the night. Nia's mother was exceptionally happy with the trip as she bought many things for herself. The markets were full of happy and warm people selling colourful clothes and other items. Nia's mother bought her a lovely Rajasthani doll and a set of bangles. Nia's father was more interested in taking photographs of beautiful Forts around the area. Other than shopping and taking pictures Nia's family enjoyed the local food. As for Nia, the 4th day when they went for a camel ride was the most memorable day. Nia was scared and unsure of riding the camel. But later on, she enjoyed the view of the vast desert and pretty sand dunes full riding on the camel's back. She felt like a Princess. Seeing her cheerful expressions made her parents happy and they promised her to come back again next year for another camel safari.
