

A food chain is a sequence showing how energy and nutrients move from one living thing to another as they eat each other